The United Kingdom voted on 4 July 2024 to elect a new Parliament. The results have painted a transformed political landscape that will shape British politics and society for the years to come. As the fallout of the election is still going on, this event will bring together different speakers from academia, journalism and civil society to discuss the 2024 UK General Election. The panelists will analyse the election results, talk about the state of public opinion and reflect about the political implications for the UK as well as for Germany.

Everyone is welcome to attend.
